

Joey Stuckey Review/Quotes from Buena Vista University

Joey Stuckey wowed the Buena Vista University campus in November 2008. Joey was brought to my attention by one of our professors on campus who thought Joey's knowledge of the music industry, performance style, along with his blindness could "wow" our students both in the class as well as on stage. Joey and his wife Jennifer came onto campus a few days prior to his concert. Joey was able to attend some classes where he spoke about the industry as well as how he is able to do this job while being blind. Our students were fascinated and looked forward to him being able to demonstrate what he spoke about on the stage. A few days later, we flew his band in where they played a rocking good show to our BVU population as well as some people from the public.

Booking Joey was one of the most pleasurable experiences this campus has had. With me, he was able to book pretty easily. Since we were booking him for multiple days, it did take some time getting our schedules together, but that was the toughest part - the rest was cake! He has one of the friendliest personalities and would talk about or do anything that you asked of him during his stay. He also likes to stay busy, he's not one of those people who is only with you to do a show and then "get out of Dodge". When he was on campus, he was ours and wanted to make sure that we got out of him what we expected (and we got more!). His wife is also a pleasure to be around, and together they are quite the entertainers. The band was also nice and easy to work with both booking and tech-wise. They played a great show and kept us entertained with antics throughout the night!

Thank you, Joey, for such a fun event that I could book and to share it with our community!

-Lisa Wagner, Event Technical Services Director and Academic and Cultural Event Series Director,
Buena Vista University (Iowa)